

The Citizens' Committee Hopes to Secure a Re-Count.

Proofs of Incompetency That Set Aside All Explanations.

A strong effort will be made by the citizens to secure a recount of the city, and the unfairness and inadequacy of the present census will be urged at Washington. A meeting of the committee appointed at the gathering of the citizens at St. Paul, Minn., which was held yesterday afternoon, and C. H. Sampson was deputed to visit Washington and take steps to secure a recount. Supervisor Weigel was present at the meeting, and made an attempt to defend the work done by the census takers. He stated that he had been with great consideration, but the proofs in the hands of the committees were so clearly demonstrative of the inefficient and careless manner in which the trust confided in him had been performed, that the Supervisor was unable to make any comfortable excuses for the error. When it was proposed to send Mr. Sampson to Washington for the purpose of calling the attention of the proper officials to the gross inaccuracies of the census, the committee decided to postpone the matter until the next session of the legislature, and leave to-night for the national capital.

Mr. C. M. Kasper, who was hoped to accomplish Mr. Simpson said: "We are not asking for anything. We are simply going to be taken, and was received by the government as correct. The grounds for asking it were that the census is incomplete." Did we not know what Mr. Weigel's estimate was, the lists published in the "Morning Star" and the "Daily Worker" that the census 'complete' would be a fraud? We have been told that the figures have been omitted, and I believe far more. There is scarcely a merchant in town that has not been asked to supply figures, and of omission, and of course there are thousands that are not known. What we intended to do was to get a list of all the stores and Weigel's figures and facts be allowed to stand. We are not going to let the government say, "We want its citizens counted, and fairly counted. Whether the Census Bureau will do it or not is not our business." We have insisted that a full list of questions must be asked, we shall see that the answers to them be given. We are sure that a new census will be taken. In case it is, every effort will be made to use the results. We are going to use them. I am in favor of asking Mr. Weigel to co-operate with us, as we are going to use his antagonizing the local supervisor.

THE PROPOSED NEW CENSUS
has excited the indignation and at with universal favor. The only objection raised was to the idea of allowing the present census takers to continue in office. The ground was generally taken that St. Louis has been given one Weigel census and did not need another. The new census is a more accurate count, made by competent men, and will give a more correct picture of the population of the city. It is not the policy of concealing as far as possible the blun-derness of the present census. The voice of Prof. C. M. Woodward as the man to whom should be intrusted the management of the new census is a strong one. The idea of employing the present Supervisor is condemned. Great indignation has been expressed at the idea of allowing the present shift the blame from his shoulders to that of the new census. It is felt that the
that his employees were hampered in their work by the unwillingness of the citizens to cooperate. The new census is a fair a libel upon St. Louis, and one calculated to do the city great injury. Predictions are made that the new census will be a
and its results will show whether apathy
of the citizens is the cause of the failure of the census is responsible for the inaccuracies and omissions of the count.

complaints of those who have not been humiliated continue to pour in from all quarters. The city fathers and the employers of labor have taken the trouble to raise their superbidens, in nearly all cases to the level of the city fathers. The city fathers had been omitted, but few supposed that the city fathers would be so easily deceived. The results proved. The Post-Dispatch circulars distributed at the request of the city fathers, to the hundreds who had escaped the eagle eyes of the Kellogg enumerators, while every mail brought in the names of the city fathers, and the necessity for more city fathers, President of the Mercantile Club, said: "It is ridiculous to suppose that there are only 400,000 people in this city. There are 1,000,000 people in this city. It is a city, that we have far more." D. F. Greer said: "The present figures are absurd."

The Citizens' Committee has gone to work in active, business-like manner, and a report of the citizens of St. Louis is now as ready. This necessity for it has been so very apparent that all efforts to calm the indignant minds of the people have failed, and the feeling that a gross and palpable injustice has been done to the city has crystallized into a determination to right that wrong and give Louis credit for what she deserves. The committee is composed of men of the highest character and ability, and it is a man who say the best St. Louis could do to adopt the philosophy of a small town who fall in the creek has suggested the idea of electing a committee of citizens to have a recount. There are citizens of more active spirit, and they mean that Mr. Louis shall be full and fair count and this has been their first purpose ever since the Post-Dispatch announced that they would do it. The Post-Dispatch showed how grievously the city had been wronged.

They came together with this purpose the committee of the Mercantile Club, which was appointed at Mayor Noonan's request. The active workers were Joseph M. Hayes presided and the committee present were Mayor Noonan, Mayor's son, L. B. Secretary Frank Gallenrie, and by invitation, Maj. Weigel. There was a meeting of the committee on June 10, 1890, which lasted for some time, and then the following resolutions were given out:

"Resolved, That the committee have been encountered by Maj. Weigel, supervisor, and his corps of enumerators in taking the census of the city."

"Resolved, that it is the sense of the committee, that a recount of the population of the city should be made, and that the consent of Sup. Porter of the United States census be requested, and that the enumeration be given the new enumeration."

"Resolved, That Mr. C. H. Sampson be requested, that he be nominated to go to Washington, and that he obtain from Mr. Porter his consent to the new enumeration, and that he be authorized to do so."

"Resolved, That Mr. C. H. Sampson co-operate with the city officials now in Washington."

At the meeting of the committee, Messrs. Leavett Bell and M. J. Murphy the telegraph men were present.

Knowing that City Concessor Leavett Bell and Harbor Commissioner Murphy are both in Washington, the committee determined to enlist their aid, and the following telegram was sent to them:

JUNE 20, 1890.

Leavett Bell and M. J. Murphy, care of Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

The committee adopted by the Mercantile Club and acting with the Mayor, beg you to go to Washington, and obtain from the committee, that a recount of the population of the city should be made, and that the consent of Supl. Porter of the United States census be requested, and official sanction be given to the new enumeration.

Let me hear from you.

JOE M. HAYES, chairman, of the committee on the letter carriers plan to be adopted. The recount will be placed in the charge of Prof. C. M. Woodward, who will be in charge of the canvass and re-census to the benefit of the city, and his assistants will be the letter carriers. The additional expense of the canvass and re-census is immense. The letter carriers have established routes which cover the entire city and, in addition, they have a large territory outside the city of St. Louis. They know, and are known by everyone on their routes, the names of the letter carriers. This information is vastly superior to those of strangers. Besides that, the letter carriers are not to be paid for the canvass and re-census and will not throw obstacles in their way by an unnecessary and offensive discussion of the matter. The letter carriers are so competent a guide as Prof. Woodward, the carriers are sure to secure a count of the letter carriers in the city of St. Louis. Mr. C. H. Sampson was authorized to represent the committee in Washington, and he will be in charge of the canvass and re-census and obtain his official sanction to the recount.

Doing Patchwork.

A census enumerator was found last last evening on the block on Clark Avenue between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, going from house to house inquiring how many people lived in each place. He asked the names or ages, he simply counted noses and he noted the number of people.

"What does this mean?" was a question that was asked him in several different places. He said that he just did his job and that was all he had to do.

"Yes," he said, "I am covering the whole city."

"Yes," they go over the entire city again and again. He said that he was sure that all these stories are true about the number of people missed. Each enumerator will take a list of the names of the people who live in the block.

So Maj. Weigel will make an effort to find out how many people there are in St. Louis. He will be sure to get the names of the people complaining to persuade him to do it. He will be sure to get the names of the people who are not complaining to get through the city. He will be sure to get the names of the people who are not complaining to get through the city. He will be sure to get the names of the people who are not complaining to get through the city.

last week has now been developed almost exclusively for the purpose of making the census not been made which is fairly decent. The work has not only been done slowly, but has been done in a haphazard manner. It is not until the enumeration must begin on the first of September that the census takers are ordered to enter 100 inhabitants in two weeks. The two weeks expired last Saturday night. Rogers' district was the first to begin. The supervisor began. Three days' grace are given the supervisor in case of necessity, and Major Rogers has been given the full three days' grace. He has not yet finished his work until the expiration of that time. Last night he reported that he had completed his lists as complete. On Sunday the first DISPATCH showed what a farce the census was. Major Rogers' district was the first, and ninety enumerators who had "completed" their districts were sent out to "complete" the remainder of the township, and adding to their "completed" schedules the names of the inhabitants who had not been on the patchwork on Monday morning. On Tuesday night 100 had reported "completed," and the remaining 90 were sent out to "complete" their district. Forty more had reported "completed" on Wednesday morning, and there were 200 engaged in patchwork, while 88 had reported "completed" on Tuesday night. The day after the 200 had reported "completed" the Saturday previous. Finding that the work could not be finished by that night, the enumerators were ordered to "complete" their work beyond the utmost limit of the time allowed. On Sunday night 223 had reported "completed," and on Monday morning 238 had reported "completed." On Tuesday night the number of enumerators had increased to 244, and to-day 251 of the enumerators, who should have been ordered to "complete" their work, are doing patchwork, and their pupils are doing patchwork, thus bringing the total of the absurd sum of 450,000.

For a Recount.

On morning paper quotes Mr. Jos. M. Hayes saying that he did not believe the population of St. Louis was over 450,000, which put him in a rather disagreeable position, being chairman of the committee which was to manage the recount. He was asked to-day if he had made any such statement. "No," he replied. "I never said that. We were kind in a jocular way and I made some remarks of that nature; that we ought to be glad that there was a chance to get the figures straight, but I did not make such a statement seriously. It is evident and I think beyond question, that a large number of persons have been missed and enough, I think, to justify a recount. I have made no guess as to the number of persons who will be added, for, for no one can tell, but we are certainly entitled to a full, fair count, and the census is not a thing to be trifled with. And on that, St. Louis does not want any more counted than are here, but she does

"Will the recount be begun at once?"

"We are waiting to hear from Washington. It is not to be done until it is clear it will be officially recognized. That would be waste of labor and would do no good, because the election would be thrown back to St. Louis. Mr. Porter will be requested to sign a statement that he will consent to a recount on his reply our action will depend. It is a vague hope that we will be able to secure a recount. We must demand a re-count Government expense."

"If he should order that would he not have the right to demand a recount?"

"I hardly think so since they have shown incapacity. At any rate we can raise the money. There is a fund for the purpose of the fund raised to fight railroad discrimination."

"Will you call a public meeting?"

"That depends on the answer we get from Washington. If we get the answer that we are to proceed, we will then take the next step. Forward, or taken any steps toward winning the actual work because the commission is not going to do anything. The only thing necessary is to get the consent of Mr. Porter."

The storm continued to the northwest through Paw Paw Grove and killed several people in that place. Twenty houses were ried to places. Some of the victims were carried several hundred yards and mangled beyond recognition. Huge trees were torn to the roots. The width of the storm was eight rods and it progressed at the rate of eight miles an hour. The scene when the tempest struck Paw Paw was full of horror. The village was enveloped in a black cloud and a fearful roaring was heard. In an instant the air was full of flying wood and timbers, and the tempest passed quickly over it was seen that the town had suffered a fearful stroke.
